Effective Oct 1 2014, the SOC Statement of Work has removed the Service-specific programs - SOCAD, SOCNAV, SOCMAR and SOCCOAST. The consolidated system is now called the DNS-2 (for associate degrees) and the DNS-4 (for bachelor's degrees). With this change, member institutions are now required to accommodate all servicemembers and their family members, regardless of Service. Any service-affiliated student at the home institution should be issued a Student Agreement for degrees in the DNS. Institutions are encouraged to issue an Open Network Student Agreement for degrees not in the DNS. The Air Force is not included in this requirement.

Due to timing, we are still publishing our data under the old system. If you have any questions about this change, or procedures relating to it, please contact your Education Service Officer or Education Center. SOC DNS Project Directors are also available for assistance.

Overview

Chapter 4 gives locations for all SOC Degree Network System units (i.e., wherever a Degree Network System institutional member is approved to provide a degree serving military installations anywhere in the world). In addition, networks available through distance learning or learning assessment can be found under appropriate headings, such as "All Sites, Distance Learning," "All Sites, Learning Assessment," and Service-specific groupings.

Chapter 4 is organized by Service. Within each Service-specific section, colleges and network locations are listed by installation, by network, and by college.

This chapter can be useful to military counselors, college advisers, or military students in planning their degrees:

- When a student wants to enroll in college degree program and needs to know which networks are provided on or accessible to his or her installation
- When a student, already enrolled in a SOC Degree Network System degree program, is transferred or leaves the military service and needs to know which colleges offer courses at his or her new location.

Counselors, advisers, and students should understand the difference between Auxiliary and Guaranteed Transfer networks described below when researching degree options.

Network Types

A network consists of a number of degree programs in a single academic area offered by SOC Degree Network System Core member institutions at a variety of military installations, through distance learning, or by learning assessment. The two types of Networks within the Degree Network System are Guaranteed-Transfer Networks and Auxiliary Networks:

- A Guaranteed-Transfer Network consists of degrees that must achieve a 40 percent standard of two-way guaranteed transferability in major and major-related courses. Courses with two-way guaranteed transferability are listed in the SOC Degree Network System Transferability Tables. Guaranteed-Transfer Networks for bachelor's degrees are:

- Accounting
- Banking/Finance
- Business Administration
- Computer Studies
- Criminal Justice
- General Business
- Health Services Management
- History
- Human Resource Management
- Information Systems Management
- Management
- Marketing/Retailing
- Psychology
- Public Administration
- Technical Management

- An Auxiliary Network consists of degrees that are popular or career-related and fall outside of the Guaranteed-Transfer Networks. To participate in Auxiliary networks, Core institutions must have at least one degree in a Guaranteed-Transfer Network. Degree programs in Auxiliary Networks are not required to meet transfer standards that apply to degrees within the Guaranteed-Transfer Networks, but may include some guaranteed transferability derived from courses also present in the college's Guaranteed-Transfer Network degrees. Auxiliary Networks for bachelor's degrees are:

- Applied Science and Technology
- Aviation Studies
- Communication
- Education/Instructional Development
- Electronics Technology
- General and Liberal Studies
- Homeland Security
- Interdisciplinary Studies
- Other Career-Related
- Religion

- Degrees from SOC Degree Network System Affiliate member institutions are not included in either network type. Rather, Affiliate member institutions have been selected by a specific military Service to offer one or more highly specialized degrees that meet an identified educational need of its servicemembers. Because of the often unique nature of these degrees, there is no articulated two-way transfer guarantee associated with any course within the degree offered by the Affiliate member institution. Therefore, courses from Affiliate member institutions are not included in the SOC Degree Network System Transferability Tables.
